HARBOR, RIVER AND MARINE NEWS

Shipping Transactions and Notes of Interest Along The Bay Front.

The steamer Tarpon entered yesterday from her regular weekly run to points to the east. She brought in 712 barrels of naval stores, miscellaneous goods and a good passenger list. Captain Barrow reports a good trip. The steamer will leave tonight on her regular run to Mobile.

The barge Escambia was towed down from Escambia bay yesterday with a cargo of 425 barrels of naval stores.

The schooner Norwich and Genoa unloaded heavy cargoes of naval stores at Central wharf yesterday.

The steamer Capt. Fritz arrived late yesterday afternoon from points as far up as Camp Walton. She brought in a heavy cargo of naval stores and shingles. She also brought in a number of passengers.

The schooner Berateons entered yesterday light, and is at Palafox wharf to load cargo.

The North German Lloyd steamship company yesterday characterized as wholly incorrect the report from Paris that the international conference of representatives of the great shipping companies, which held a short session at the French capital last week, was dissolving because insurmountable difficulties had been encountered. All the representatives were united on one of the fundamental propositions, namely, the discussion of rates with the Italian lines. The adjournment to the end of August was taken at the request of the Italian lines in order to afford time for an adequate examination of the proposals.—Philadelphia Record, Aug. 12.

The British steamship Imogen, which arrived at Montevideo on June 10 from New York, reports that she passed on July 31, in latitude 21.40 southwest the Dutch steamer Amstelland, and outward bound from Buenos Ayres, with a fire aboard, which, however, was extinguished while the Imogen lay nearby. The Amstelland's master said that the fire broke out in a cargo of baled wool, among which was found the dead body of a stow-away. During the progress of the fire some of the passengers of the Amstelland, and lowered a boat, into which they jumped. This craft was taken back to the Amstelland by one of the boats from the Imogen, and the passengers rejoined their vessel. The Imogen's master considers it likely that some of the passengers jumped overboard from the Amstelland and were drowned. He says that when the fire was extinguished the Amstelland, which had about 330 passengers on board, continued on her voyage to Amsterdam and that the damage she sustained probably was not serious.—Philadelphia Record.

Important alterations are soon to be made to the port of Havre, France, at a cost of $15,000,000. An immense basin surrounded by two miles of quays will be constructed in the estuary of the Seine, and in direct communication with the new enter port. The new dock will be without gates, and open to the tide, so that the biggest liners can enter or leave at any moment, the draft allowed for being forty feet. The whole will be completed by a drydock 1000 feet long by 114 feet broad. The local authorities are to provide half the cost and the state the other half.—Shipping Illustrated.

In their annual report for 1907-1908 the directors of the Leyland Shipping Company state that the year's working of the steamers showed a net profit of about £2276 on completed voyages to which is added sundry credits, making a total of £2379. Against this is placed £4551 for interest and £243 for loss on completed voyages of sailing ships closed during the year, leaving a balance of £2415. The amount of £6,000 provided last year for estimated losses on uncompleted voyages of sailing ships proved insufficient, and in addition to this and the £243 before mentioned, £5,000 has been set aside, and it is hoped that the losses on sailing ship voyages now current are fully provided for. Shipping generally has passed through a year of extremely low freights, dear coal, and detention in all parts of the world, in fact expenses all around have increased, while rates of freight have decreased. At the present moment the steamer "Planet Neptune" is laid up at Hamburg, and the ship "Leyland Brothers" at Portland, Ore. The directors recognize that while the present low freights continue, this is the best course to pursue. They do not look for any rise in freights before the autumn, when it is hoped that business will improve, and with fair freights from the north Pacific and the West Coast of South America, the sailing ship fleet is well placed to take advantage of same. The directors have it in view to sell one or more of the sailing ships, but owing to the present state of business it is very difficult to get any reasonable offers.—Shipping Illustrated.
